Greenville Unity Park - Renderings

Sweetwater Park: Key Findings

- ▶ Sweetwater Park presents a big recreation and open space opportunity for downtown and the surrounding neighborhoods.
- ▶ The park is underutilized because there is a perceived lack of safety. The park feels isolated, secret, and hidden.
- ▶ We need to create a destination that is connected to Depot Park, but provides a different experience. Unlike Depot Park, Sweetwater Park could focus on a quieter place for contemplation, meditation, and connecting with nature.
- ▶ The park’s “theme” could inform its programming. If this park is intended as a quiet space for contemplation, activities like tai chi could be integrated.
- ▶ The Department of Sustainable Development, in a partnership with Wild Spaces & Public Places, is a natural fit to lead this effort. This would be supported by ongoing engagement a Solutions Group led by residents, downtown businesses, local institutions and project champions.

2022-751

Natural extension of Depot Park, most successful recreation in 30 years	Need connection to Depot Park - people need to feel safe walking in between	People are not using the park now because of lack of safety	Park feels secret, hidden
Challenge is shape - long and linear, harder to maintain for safety, visibility. Trail focus rather than depot and community focused	Depot is destination - food, boomer, play. Expand what makes it attractive. Sweetwater as greenspace with restaurant, performance space, reasons to go there!	More people = less pushback on the investment	Thriving Cities Initiative with neighborhoods in Sweetwater loop festival (February)
Connection to Depot Park. Sweetwater connection to neighborhoods, Sweetwater could be part of loop	Library: point of programming, bring people to the park, children area with playground/reading room	activities for teens/older kids, with library: butterfly garden, green spaces	Loop would be popular with teens: bigger space to see downtown

Streatery Next Steps

STREATERY / PEDESTRIAN ZONE

- ▶ Street redesign for flexible use and beautification
- ▶ Closed to thru traffic and on-street parking, except emergency services
- ▶ Businesses operate within their properties and portions of the ROW, extent to be determined.

FESTIVAL STREET

- ▶ Street redesign for flexible use and beautification.
- ▶ Open to thru traffic and on-street parking daily, but can be easily closed for events.
- ▶ Businesses operate within their property rights, expanded sidewalks, and regular special events.

Streatery: Key Findings

- ▶ The Streatery provides a lively outdoor space in the heart of downtown, but could be more business-friendly by adding some flexibility to the street closure.
- ▶ The Streatery feels underutilized and under-programmed. There are not enough restaurants to activate the space during the daytime.
- ▶ There is a difference in the parking needs of daytime businesses versus the nighttime use of restaurants.
- ▶ The closure makes it challenging for some businesses to have deliveries, as trucks have to park in the middle of the road.
- ▶ Parking issues are not the same for all businesses - these vary by type of business and their times of operation.
- ▶ The Streatery zone by Flaco's is very successful, though some Pleasant Street neighbors are concerned with the closure of a significant neighborhood entrance and would like to see this re-opened to traffic.

Like current setup, need for seasonal approach when use is highest.	July versus November - impact of heat on use	Space fills up consistently year round and in summer, except for rain	Space 3 more lively than the other two, well designed
Flexibility - daytime car use versus nighttime pedestrian use	Deliveries - trucks park in front of businesses, block traffic (ex. Starbucks by hippodrome)	Mist and fans can make a difference during heat, make outdoor spaces pleasant	Parking downtown: a parking problem means people want to be there, not a big problem downtown
Flaco's safer crossing on University would improve connection to other Streatery spaces. Cars have crashed into the building a few times prior to Streatery	Flaco's Pleasant Street gateway, patio and Streatery could be used as a community welcoming space (showcase PS history with signage)	Flaco's: Streatery there has increased safety because of people using it. Emergency vehicles into neighborhood have not been an issue, wants to work with neighbors to get support	Support for Lucy's space - markets, tables, ability to move tables

Place-Management Organizations: Commonalities

Jacob Gordon, Jacksonville
Downtown Vision

Neal Schafers, Miami DDA

Marc Conte, Columbus SID

Rebecca Fleischaker, Louisville DT
Partnership

- ▶ Each has a governance structure that is independent of routine City operations and control.
- ▶ A funding mechanism that is distinct and supplemental to City financial contributions.
- ▶ A vibrant Ambassador program designed to promote outreach to downtown stakeholders.
- ▶ A vital marketing/communications presence that advocates on behalf of the downtown and reiterates the downtown brand.
- ▶ Provisions of enhanced services inclusive of clean/safe; business development; real estate curating, events/programming and place making.

Downtown Management: Key Findings

- ▶ A downtown management organization needs to be nimble and responsive. This organization offers a premium service – over and above what the City provides.
- ▶ Place management organizations are on the forefront of policing – not leading with enforcement, but instead through crisis-intervention, homeless outreach, and partnerships with public safety.
- ▶ Being an independent agency allows these organizations to act fast with a relatively small staff, maintaining relationships with property owners while still being well-connected to the City and County.
- ▶ Downtown management agencies are not forced on property owners, they are formed from a need and desire for enhanced services.

Thank You!
