

Stephen Mhere, CIA, CISA

Stephen Mhere is a professional with broad public sector experience spanning more than 18 years. He has worked for a public school district, state government, and is currently with a city government. His roles in these settings underline the diversity of his experience. They include quality improvement assessments in public education, management analysis in a state government's tax collection department, program evaluation in public healthcare programs, and internal auditing in city government.

Stephen's professional experience is backed by appropriate professional training. He has credentials as a certified internal auditor and as a certified information systems auditor.

Stephen is a keen learner with broad academic training. He holds baccalaureate and graduate degrees in the areas of science and business management. He is currently working on a graduate degree in public affairs and is on course to complete it in the summer or fall of 2024.

Beyond his professional and academic interests, Stephen is an avid sports enthusiast. He has particular interest in soccer, a game he has played and now participates in as a referee. Playing soccer has inculcated in Stephen the spirit of teamwork. Refereeing has instilled in him the importance of objectivity and impartiality. The importance of teamwork, objectivity, and impartiality in leadership cannot be overemphasized.

Education

University of Central Florida
Orlando, FL
PhD candidate (Public Affairs)

University of Missouri-Columbia
Columbia, MO
Master of Science (Health Informatics)

Pittsburg State University
Pittsburg, KS
Bachelor of Science (Computer Science)

Baker College
Flint, MI
Master of Business Administration